Catarrh

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it can be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the efficacy of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Catarrh

Parilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations have failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system and makes you feel renewed in health and strength. Hood's Sarsaparilla has tried no more for catarrh and superior blood than anything else I ever used. Dr. J. C. Sarsaparilla, N. Y.

THE SPEARING OF FISH

METHODS OF PURSUING THIS PISCATORIAL SPORT.

The Kerosene Torch Has Superseded the Old-Fashioned Pine Knots and Wire Back-Habits of Different Kinds of Fish and the Difficulty in Successfully Impaling Them.

THE SPEAR WAS

at one time regarded as an honorable and effective implement of war, but now is only used by barbarians and sportsmen.

Our inland rivers and coast waters are up in quest of the silver eel or the pickerel.

Fish spears have long been laid away, for spearing fish during the spawning season is a crime that should call down all the thunders of the piscatorial Jove. Yet, such fish slayers do exist.

Visitors along the bays of our coast and inland streams may now see, when they are walking abroad in the calm evening, a light-like enlarged will-o'-the-wisps floating from point to point among the shallows.

They investigate them, to find the mysterious spears which float on the water, one to pole the boat and one to spear the fish. The light proceeds from an upright about three feet high, from which projects an arm of the same length, the end of which is loosely wrapped around with tow or cotton twine.

On the top of the upright is a two-quart can fitted with a faucet and holding kerosene, which flows fast or slow as desired along the arm, which is hollow, and saturates the bundle of tow, and this being lighted attracts the fish and shows them plainly to the spearer.

So I threw away the thread and hooks and, taking my rifle along, caught another grasshopper. This I threw just as I had thrown the other, and the moment it struck the water I sighted it and followed it along as it drifted over the same pool.

As before, there was a stream of scarlet and olive green. The hopper was gone and before I knew it I had discharged the rifle into the mighty swirl. No results as first, and I thought what a fool I was to suppose that I could shoot a grasshopper with a rifle, but presently a huge pink belly made its appearance, coming to the surface, and there floated my fish larger even than he had appeared before.

I rushed in on a shallow rifle and seized him as he came down. Oh! such a beauty and not a bruise on him. He must have been entirely under water before the bullet got there, but he had received such a shock that he hardly moved after it. I had no means of weighing him, but his length was 20 1/2 inches.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

How It Comes About and the Materials Which Cause It.

From all the principles of chemistry spontaneous combustion is a possible, and in fact a frequent, phenomenon. Prof. William P. Torrey, the chemist, says that the flame in such cases invariably arises from a combination of oxygen and some material favorable to producing heat.

Wherever there is turpentine there is always danger of spontaneous combustion.

If the substance be poured on rags, especially when they are soaked with turpentine, fire is likely to follow.

Establishments, and all places where oils and turpentine are kept, are especially liable to visitations from fires of inexplicable origin.

Hay, when moist and packed tightly, ferments by a natural process and absorbs oxygen so freely as to produce flame in some cases.

But, in fact, spontaneous combustion is allowed to come in contact with bagging at fertilizer factories, is also a source of great danger. The same acid if mixed with water produces an intense heat.

A common source of unexpected combustion is the gas which escapes from a jet which has been carelessly left open.

Gas and common air produce an explosive compound, which can be touched off like gunpowder by a tiny spark.

Prof. Torrey says it is very difficult to prevent combustion which arises from natural combination, although thorough ventilation and cleanliness in private houses and business establishments will go a long way toward reducing the danger.

The phenomenon is common to all seasons, although a temperature of 70 or 80 degrees is high enough for fermentation, is most favorable to it.

An accumulation of inflammable material is always to be avoided. It was once believed that human bodies, especially those of distributors, were liable to take fire and be consumed spontaneously, but the theory finds but little acceptance in these days.

A Toy Republic.

Probably the smallest republic in the world is the one which declares its independence Aug. 9, at Frenchville, one of the Islands of the New Hebrides, and elected M. Chevallier its president. The inhabitants consist of forty Europeans (including a soldier, Engineer, and a doctor) and 500 black workmen employed by a French company. The new flag of the republic having been duly hoisted the French gunboat Sague landed a detachment and saluted the flag.

The Hot Water Cure.

The result of the "hot water cure" are said by a physician to be the stimulation of the stomach at first, but after repeated use a lessening of the tone of the digestive tract, which causes congestion and dyspepsia. Hot drinks tend to lessen bronchial irritation, and may be used profitably in some cases of consumption.

The Lady Godiva must have had exceptionally long hair since it completely concealed her lovely person. Since Ayer's Hair Vigor came into use such examples are not so rare as formerly. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but gives it a rich, silken texture.

Anguish Unspeaking.

Is endured by the victims of inflammatory rheumatism, and any form of the disease may reach that agonizing phase or attack the heart and cause death. Unhappily they who feel its preliminary twinges seldom realize this. Like other possibly dangerous maladies, rheumatism is often disregarded at the outset. Well, it will be for him if this brief notice shall serve as a warning of future peril or pain to a reader troubled with rheumatism. The proper sequel will be an instantaneous resort to the great preventative depurative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, whose brave record of professional commendation popular experience has confirmed. There is no finer or more general antidote to the virus of rheumatism in the system. Botany in its origin, it is free from the objections attendant to depurative poisons liable to be taken in more than the infinitesimal dose. The Bitters conquers malaria, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles.

About to strike

on his back, like a haversack, and a small torch in his hand, which was surrounded by a piece of bright tin held in place by wires and capable of being slid downward at the torch burned; the other, free from all incumbrances, carried the spear. Thus equipped they waded knee-deep through the shallows, avoiding the deepest pools and the extreme shallows. A likely hole was found and both stood still. Then the man with the basket pitched a stone down stream, just on the other side. The fish rushed out of their hiding-places into the circle of light, and were fascinated by it until the spear secured more than one of their number.

The rivers of Belgium and the famous fish of Holland are thickly populated with lampreys. We use them here for food and in this country they seldom grow to any size, but the Belgians consider them a great delicacy and export them to England in large quantities for table purposes.

In the spring months they are speared in great quantities in a rather novel manner. The river there are crossed by a succession of small dams or weirs, over which the water comes tumbling only a few inches in depth. The spears have a lantern strapped on the crown of their head by an arrangement of wire, and a basket strapped at their backs. This basket has a top shaped like our gel pots, with a hole through which the fish can be dropped, but can not crawl out again. He takes his station at the foot of the dam or weir where the light from his lantern falls on the water above. The lampreys at night hold on to the stones with their mouths like our suckers, and when they see the light they first to the dam and over it, as they slip down the incline they hang to the spear strikes them and they are transferred to the basket.

Visitors crossing the bridges see these lights scattered over the river, blending with the lights on shore, rendering it difficult to define the houses and the river; they think it the lamp of some vessel lying at anchor or at a wharf, and go home to bed never dreaming of the strange industry going on just under their noses.

HERE'S A GOOD STORY.

And It Is So Very Original that It Must Be Told.

A correspondent of Forest and Stream has been down the river, the Big Spring Creek "that long" indicating something less than a yard, and so, he writes, having no fishing, I twisted a formidable cable of black linen thread, and for some hours I patiently waded the icy stream and tried to convince the fish that my ponderous tackle was not so bad as it looked; still, they wouldn't even consider the matter. I had my doubts as to their being any fish there after all, but I threw a grasshopper on the current, and as I watched it drift down over a deep green pool under a ledge of rock, an enormous trout, as big as a barrel, such as I have seen porpoises roll, and gathered in the grasshopper, thereby putting an end to my doubts at once.

Well, think I to myself, that's a little the best trout I ever saw or heard of, and I must certainly make another effort. So, with many misgivings, set about twisting another line of white thread, when suddenly it occurred to me that if I could make him jump like that again, so coolly and easily, I would have time enough to put a rifle bullet mighty close to him before he could settle back to the safety of deep waters. Shooting trout on the rise, too, would certainly be original if not exactly lawful.

So I threw away the thread and hooks and, taking my rifle along, caught another grasshopper. This I threw just as I had thrown the other, and the moment it struck the water I sighted it and followed it along as it drifted over the same pool.

As before, there was a stream of scarlet and olive green. The hopper was gone and before I knew it I had discharged the rifle into the mighty swirl. No results as first, and I thought what a fool I was to suppose that I could shoot a grasshopper with a rifle, but presently a huge pink belly made its appearance, coming to the surface, and there floated my fish larger even than he had appeared before.

To Our Patrons

IN JANESVILLE

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 15th, 1899.

Wherever we travel our mind very often carries us back to our friends and customers in our beautiful home city.

We are impelled to keep the ball rolling so far as our "Ada" may do it and we are not led to this decision from selfish motives alone, for we know whereof we speak when we assert that in no other city can there be found so desirable homesites as we offer you in our River-view Park Addition, when locality, price and terms are considered, so at the risk of being called tiresome, we shall from week to week and day to day HARP upon this theme.

If for a Quarter of a Century and more we have traveled up and down the land from the Atlantic to the Rockies and we have yet to find another part of any city that surpasses the third ward of Janesville in desirable points for home, and it needs no prophetic vision to see that in the next ten years no section in that city will improve faster than said third ward. You can't go wrong if you buy property for a home anywhere in that ward.

If You Want

A LITTLE OF THE CREAM don't you fail to go up and look over "River-view Park"; go up twice and thrice, even a dozen times and see the preparations we are making to have there the most desirable HOME SITE section in the most desirable ward of the BEST CITY for homes in twenty states; locate carefully in your mind the beautiful PARK; reflect that all around it there are four-road wide avenues; that the BUILDING LINE of the twenty charming lots, fronting that park is 30 feet back from street line and then figure; homes built from north and south facing park will be separated about 18 rods from those opposite and those built facing the park on the east and west, the front doors will be about 34 rods apart. Think what this means; an open space—a park—surrounded with nice little homes—twenty of them, and in the midst thereof a charming play ground, a beautiful park, the breathing place for all the happy home-holders in this charming addition of ours. Don't forget, we grade the streets; we place trees and shrubs plenty in the park and surround the park entirely with good sidewalks. WHERE CAN YOU FIND SUCH INDUCEMENTS?

Then It Is So Cheap And Easy.

you can get a lot with park privileges, with avenues all graded and with no outlay in tax of every lot, all easy access and but very few of any of these lots are over three quarters of a mile from the postoffice. You can get one of these lots, we say, on such easy terms and at so low price, that you will never miss the money you put into it. Remember that lots purchased before December 21st, next, you have about three years to make your payments on, and NO INTEREST to eat you up. It takes but a very small amount of money to close the contract, and the monthly payments are unheard of small and the terms are simply captivating.

Did You Notice

The sidewalks on Main and back streets? The back street walk we shall build up to the corner of Wheeler street. These represent the class of improvements we plan to have all through the park, and every pledge we have made or shall make later (we have yet to build back, many surprises for the owners of lots in our addition) will be filled to the letter. We are bound to make friends in the deal. We desire that more than large profit.

A friend of ours said, the writer last Monday: "Had you put these lots up at auction they would have sold for more than your advertised price, and I can't see what reason you have for making such low prices." OF COURSE we could not see, no one can see, but we know that these prices will put us into most friendly relations with every buyer, and that every customer will become for us a walking and talking advertisement, and with this in view what booteth it whether we get full value or not. We shall reap from this sowing later on.

Yours very truly,

GEO. L. & SARAH H. CARRINGTON.

Married—last evening at the home of the bride's parents in Mineral Point avenue, Miss Mary Bauman and Mr. Edward Horne, at eight o'clock the bride and groom entered the parlor to the music of a wedding march played by Miss Augusta Bauman, cousin of the bride, and took their places under an arch of ivy leaves from the center of which hung a floral heart pierced with Cupid's arrow.

The bride was attended by Miss Mary Zienow, while Mr. Charles Horne, brother of the groom, was best man. The ceremony of the Presbyterian church was performed by the Rev. W. F. Brown.

After the ceremony the bride and groom were the recipients of the hearty congratulations of the assembled company who then sat down to an elegant wedding supper. The bride received a large number of presents both useful and ornamental, including an elegant bed-room set from her mother, and a gold watch and chain from the groom.

ATTRACTING ATTENTION.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF ADVERTISING IN THE DAILY PRESS.

It is very interesting to watch the development of advertising as it appears in the columns of the daily newspapers, says a writer in the New York Sun. Departments of trade which formerly rejected that means of attracting attention are more and more learning to profit by its advantages. Advertisers are also becoming skillful in the literary construction of their announcements, so that now the advertising columns of a journal really help to enrich its pages, and they present a mass of varied information of great value to the reader.

The representations of the advertisements, too, may be taken generally as honest and truthful, for no wise dealer seeks to draw customers by false pretense. He must have on his counters exactly what he advertises to sell, and he must sell it at exactly the advertised price. Otherwise his advertisement does him more harm than good. It may bring him in ephemeral trade, but the larger the trade is the worse it will be for him in the end. His deceived customer will make for him an evil reputation for dishonesty. Therefore ordinary sagacity prompts the dealer to tell the truth about his goods when he advertises them in a newspaper. Now and again a second and a sharper may attempt to impose on the public by publishing swindling announcements, but the number of such is few, and it is growing fewer. Moreover, the papers which such men use as a decoy are soon recognized. The swindling advertisers are after fools and gudgeons, and they are shrewd enough to advertise in the papers patronized by people of that sort.

The cheapening of the processes of manufacture during recent years has lowered prices greatly. The advertiser accordingly can appeal to the great body of purchasers, who must be careful of their money. Here in New York is the great market for obtaining stocks of superior goods at low cost, provided the merchant has the cash to pay for them. Therefore the reputable houses which advertise bargains for their customers, declare no more than the fact. At auctions or by paying cash down for a large supply where cash is imperatively required and of the first necessity, they frequently secure great quantities of goods at less than the current prices at the factories, perhaps less than cost, and selling for cash, they can afford to make their own profit proportionately small. If there are a few of them who advertise in this way, there are many who do not. It is for each individual purchaser, for the greater the volume of their business the smaller can they fix their average profits.

That is the great advantage of advertising. It makes the business known, and by multiplying the number of customers, the dealer obtains the means of attracting more. He has more money to expend on his stock, and can improve the opportunities which come so frequently to the cash buyer, and can make his margin of profit smaller. The whole success of the great retail houses has been built up in this way. There are few of them who have not had their entire development within very recent years, before which they were little haberdashery shops, and a neighborhood trade only, or they had no existence at all. There is not one of them which does not owe its success to advertising.

In the clothing trade the history is the same. The houses which are getting the custom are those that advertise the most liberally and the most judiciously, and as their custom increases they are enabled to make their prices lower and thus invite a wider range of the public. The tailors who have followed and gained are raising a new standard, and the same is true of the shoe trade, and as time goes on there will be no department of business which will not profit by the lesson that experience teaches so emphatically.

So far there are few of them who have not had their entire development within very recent years, before which they were little haberdashery shops, and a neighborhood trade only, or they had no existence at all. There is not one of them which does not owe its success to advertising.

MARRIED LIFE'S THORNY PATH.

AFTER THE MILLENS.

CLAIMING AN INFRINGEMENT ON A PATENT RIGHT.

Milwaukee Sentinel: There stepped from a train at the St. Paul depot yesterday an elderly gentleman with a snow white beard, and as he reached the front door he looked about in astonishment.

"Well, I declare," said he, "I used to live here, but I find I'm a perfect stranger." And he asked a hackman to drive him to the residence of Philatus Yale on State street.

The old gentleman lived in Milwaukee forty years ago, and he was naturally astonished at the changes he saw on all sides. It wasn't in any respect the Milwaukee he had known. His name is J. H. Russell, and he ran a tailoring establishment at the corner of Wisconsin and East Water streets forty years ago, when a little frame building, occupied the site of the present iron block just across the way. From here Mr. Russell went to California and has drifted pretty much over the whole country since. He is at present located in Maryland, about five miles from Washington.

Yesterday Mr. Yale drove him around the city and showed the old gentleman the remarkable development of Milwaukee. In the afternoon Mr. Russell called on Gerry W. Hazelton and was closeted with him for some time.

In the evening he called on N. S. Murphy and had another conference, and it developed that he has come to Milwaukee to institute suits by the wholesale against Wisconsin millers, on the ground of infringement of patent.

"I bought a patent right for Wisconsin for a middling purifier from George T. Smith," said he, "and I find that Smith has sold them to nearly every miller in Wisconsin, so they are liable to me for infringement. I paid Smith $55,000 for the patent right, but I never attempted to introduce the purifier and Smith, whose factory is at Jackson, Michigan, has used the territory he made over to me."

"When was this?"

"In 1873. Now, if I can substantiate my claim, and some of the best lawyers in Washington tell me I can, I have a pretty big thing. All the mills in the state, almost, use the patent. Allis has put it into about 200 mills in this state and I have claims for royalty against them all. Of course they can get back at Smith and he's the man I am after. I have the documents to substantiate my claim. I have already begun suit against him in Michigan and I propose to see how what I can do with Wisconsin mill men."

Mr. Russell talks entertainingly of his experience since leaving Milwaukee in those early days. He says that since then he has made and lost several fortunes. During the war he ran a line of four Mississippi steamers to New Orleans and made $300,000. He says he was one of the first men who shipped cotton from New Orleans.

CIRCUIT COURT.

THE CRIMINAL CALENDAR—THE CASE OF STATE VS. LEE.

Yesterday afternoon the divorce case of Rosa Miller against John H. Miller came on for hearing, and the court having heard the testimony of the plaintiff's witnesses, by which it appeared that the defendant was given to getting pretty drunk, and at times when drunk he threatened to kill the plaintiff, and become so abusive to her that she had been obliged to flee from the house at night and seek the home of her mother for shelter and protection. Judgment of divorce was granted the plaintiff.

This morning in the action of the state of Wisconsin against John Metcalf, the Edgerton murderer, it appearing to the court that the defendant had employed and that there had been employed in his behalf four counsel, an order was entered by the court appointing Wm. Smith, Esq., of this city, to assist District Attorney B. M. Malone in the prosecution of this action under chapter 354 of the laws of Wisconsin, 1887.

The action of the state of Wisconsin against George Lee was called. The defendant appeared in person and by his attorneys, T. J. Brooks, of Boscobel, and Edward M. Hyzer, of this city.

Eighteen jurors were called and examined as to their competency to sit as jurors on the trial of this action and the following named jurors sworn and empaneled: W. F. Christman, E. C. Heigert, J. C. Hill, E. D. Barnard, W. H. Trapp, E. S. Taylor, S. F. Dean, W. H. Hill, J. S. Oom, W. A. Pickett, J. O. Brown and A. Eager.

MATHIE DARK.

THE REV. WHARTON'S ANSWER IN THE LIBEL SUIT.

In her suit for libel against Rev. F. L. Wharton, Mrs. Moser, the woman who kept the little store around the corner and says she sold tobacco to Mr. Wharton, asks for $10,000 damages because the minister said her daughter Florence had colored blood in her veins. Mr. Wharton declares in his answer in the suit, that "the child is of dark complexion, and it was and is currently reported in the neighborhood where she has lived that the child had negro blood in its veins and that the child appears and looks like a mulatto child. The plaintiff denies using the slanderous words concerning the plaintiff, with which he is charged in the complaint, but states that what he may have said at some time was that the child Florence had the marks of an appearance of being a mulatto child, and he avers that he was then only stating a fact currently and commonly reported in the neighborhood where the parties have lived."

It speaks for itself that a lady said of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup the other day. A single bottle had cured her child of a most dreadful cough. It never fails to give speedy relief and permanent cure.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

CLOSE OF THE ANNUAL SESSION OF THE COUNTY ASSOCIATION AT BELLOIT.

The Sunday school convention closed last evening in Beloit, having proved one of the most interesting sessions ever held by the association, and the array of talent present was exceedingly large. Yesterday the leading features were papers on "How Can the Sunday School Be Made to Contribute More Largely to Pulpit Supply?" by Prof. Wm. Porter, of the college; "The Sunday School in Foreign Mission Work," by Miss Mary Porter, of Beloit, and addresses by B. J. Jacobs, of Chicago, and the Rev. T. H. Sell, secretary of the Congregational Publishing society, of Boston. Nearly all the local clergymen and the college faculty participated and much valuable thought was exchanged. The report of President Wright showed that there are 93 Sunday schools under the care of the following churches in the county: Disciples, 2; Primitive Methodist, 2; United Brethren, 3; Episcopalians, 3; Seventh Day Baptists, 3; Free Will Baptists, 3; Presbyterians, 4; Lutherans, 5; Baptists, 10; Methodist Episcopal, 18; Congregational, 19; Missions, 21. THE WATERMAN CASE.

A DECISION BY THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

A special dispatch from Washington to the Milwaukee Sentinel, under date of November 19th, mentions the following facts relating to the case of Henry Waterman, of Milton, against the Chicago & Alton railroad company.

The case of Henry Waterman against the Chicago & Alton railroad company was argued in the United States supreme court to-day by Wm. Rager, of Janesville, and S. O. Sloan, of Madison, for Waterman, and Ogden H. Fethers, of Janesville, for the railway company. Waterman says the company for $10,000 damages for injuries received in a collision in Chicago in 1882. The case was tried before Judge Bandy and a jury at Madison and resulted in a verdict of $22,000 for Waterman. The company appealed to the supreme court, and held that the case was never properly removed from the state court and so reversed the judgment. It is a great victory for the railway company, as the case reverts to the state court and must be tried all over again if Waterman is to gain anything out of the action.
